

DAY 18 Streaky Bay to Fowler Bay 10th Oct 2015

Brett in his 1930 Phaeton, left at the crack of dawn as he had commitments in Perth/Sydney. The rest of us only had a short travel so packed up leisurely and arrived at Fowler Bay around lunch time.

Fowler Bay was a thriving port in the early days exporting wheat and wool with camels used to pull the wagons on the jetty out to the ships. Now it is a very small holiday village with a store, a few houses and a Caravan Park. Today there aren't many farms still operating and we saw very few sheep.

The Caravan Park operator and his wife put on a local fresh fish evening BBQ for patrons which we all jumped at!
